In Diósárok, within District XII's green surroundings, an unfurnished family house awaits its next residents. Trees appear beyond the bright rooms' large windows, while the living-room fireplace makes cooler evenings more intimate. The interiors provide a calm foundation for creating a personal home with your own furniture and belongings.

Four bedrooms accompany the living room in this two-storey house. Separate rooms can provide space for family rest, working from home or guests. A two-tone kitchen brings its own character, while two bathrooms support daily routines, with both a bath and shower cubicle available.

The large terrace is the outdoor extension of the interior. The garden on the 963 m² plot can accommodate both quieter relaxation and shared activities. Breakfast outside or an afternoon conversation can easily become part of the routine, while trees visible from the living room keep the garden's atmosphere present indoors.

The laundry room and detached garage provide practical support for family life. In this maintained 200 m² house, the garden and separate rooms together leave space to settle for the longer term. Diósárok's Buda setting adds a quieter, greener world of home.
